Possessions of yesteryear

Possessions from the Past

Pieces of West Valley history are found in Upland's Chaffey Communities Cultural Center.

Tools once used in the citrus fields of old; clothing pioneers once wore; and even the toys settlers' children once played with are found neatly packed into the center's limited space.

And among it all is Bea Riggs, museum director.

She has seen the one-time St. Mark's Episcopal Church transformed into an unofficial West Valley settlers' museum.

"This used to be my husband's church. When he died the church asked for a memorial and I gave it $1,000," Riggs said. "I started to go to the church's meetings. All we wanted to do at first was save the building and the first thing you know we had a museum."

The church used to be at Euclid Avenue and D Street in Ontario until it was moved in 1966 to its current five-acre site near Pioneer Junior High School on 18th Street.

The theme of the museum is "Possessions of Early Settlers."

And there are plenty of them in the center. Preserving a bit of the valley's originally wasn't the aim of center supporters. Riggs said the group instead wanted a cultural center.

"But people started bringing all these things in and I didn't want to see them lost so we started saving them. Now we have this," she said pointing at center items.

The museum director said the center has "tremendous" Indian artifact and doll collections.

But it's the items of everyday West Valley life telling the story.

Several rooms are set up at the museum depicting what an early settlers' home would resemble.

Grove and farming equipment is housed in the back of the center, remnants of Upland's and the West Valley's citrus heritage.

Space is at a minimum. Many collectibles are kept in a storage shed because there isn't any room in the center, Riggs said.

The long-time museum director is writing a book about the center entitled, "A Dream Comme True." Riggs said she isn't sure when she'll complete the book because every time she thinks she's finished she finds more information to include.

The museum and Riggs have gained a reputation for being a depository of information, as well-stocked as most libraries.

Riggs said the most recent questions she's been asked is about the history of the expansive dilapidated house on the corner of 18th Street and Euclid Avenue.

"I'm not going to say anything until I look it up," she said about any questions asked of her.

The museum director said the house was built by Dr. Grainger Hyer. One of Upland's earliest mayors, D.J. Cameron, also was a tenant during the years, she said.

"Most people have asked me because the house is so old can it be saved as a historical site since it is for sale. I really don't think so," Riggs said.

Museum caretaker. Unofficial Upland historian. Riggs said she doesn't mind the work if it means people will learn more about West Valley history.

Museum supporters recently learned the facility has been designated a historical point of interest in California. The official designation can help open grant funding doors for the center.

Center officials have begun paperwork for the National Register of historic buildings.

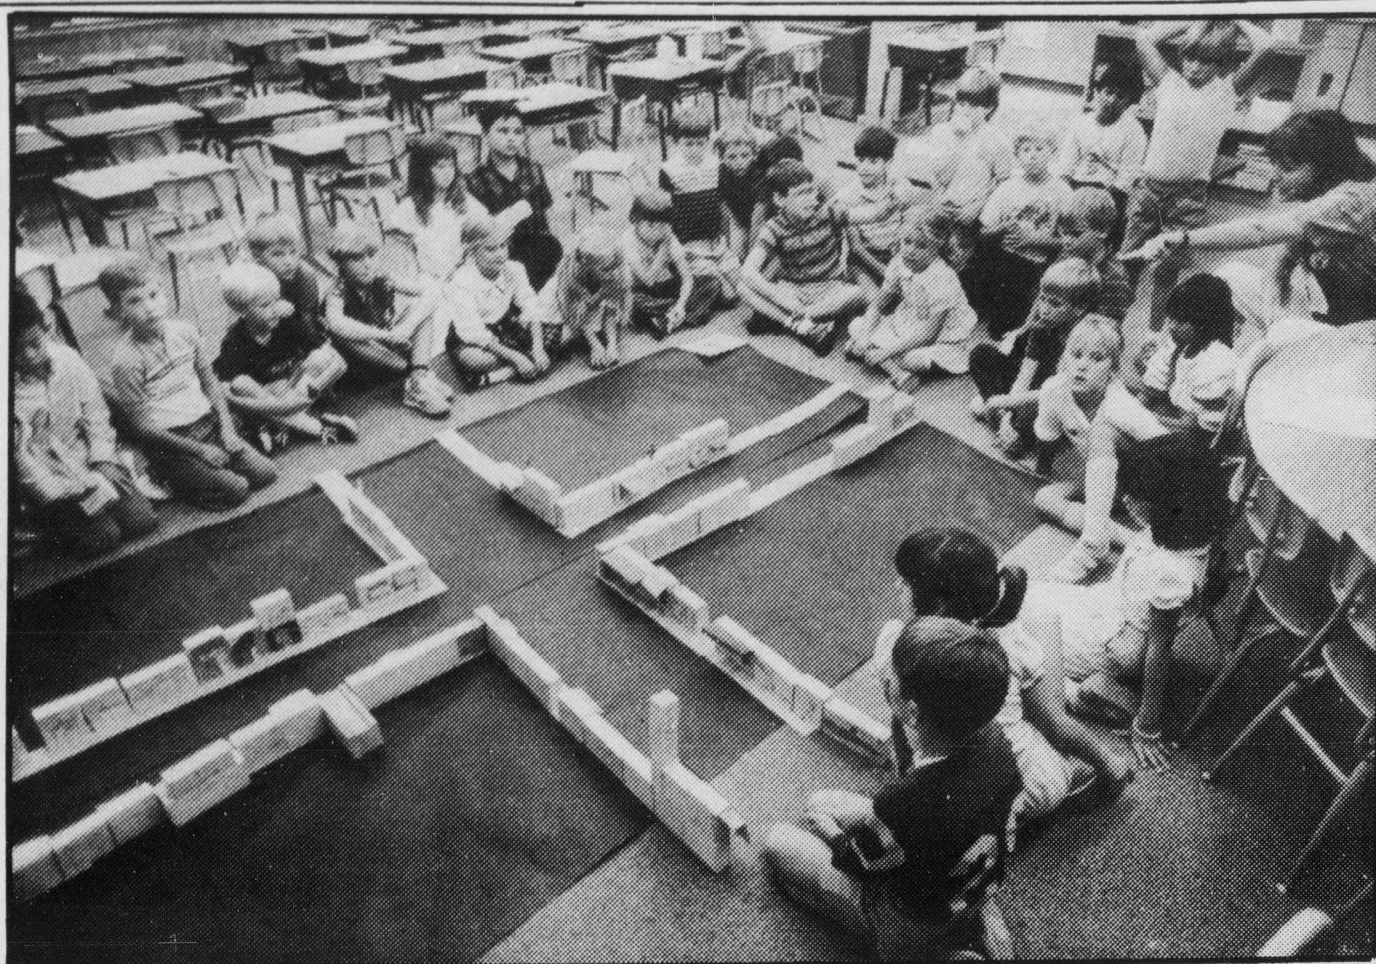

But the museum relies solely on membership fees, donations and fund-raisers to operate. The annual arts and crafts show is scheduled Oct. 20 from 1 to 5 p.m. Expansion, as soon as finances become available, is planned, Riggs said.

Museum supporters next want to tackle the construction of an exhibit hall to house a beauty shop and schoolroom display.

Eventually supporters want to build an art gallery and theater.

"We really don't have a timetable for building right now but that is what we would like to do," Riggs said.

"Right now we need space more than anything else. We also need volunteers. The center operates solely with the help of volunteers. I could never work in a hospital. This is a nice place to work. There's no sadness around here."

City construction is found easy in school

By Suzanne Sproul

Valencia School students found it easy to construct downtown Upland.

Of course, they didn't have to worry about planning and zoning regulations. They even had easier tools to work with during the project.

Using some wooden blocks, a little paint and some construction paper, it seemed a cinch in Jan Cowin's classroom.

Cowin's second and third graders are studying Upland in their social studies classes.

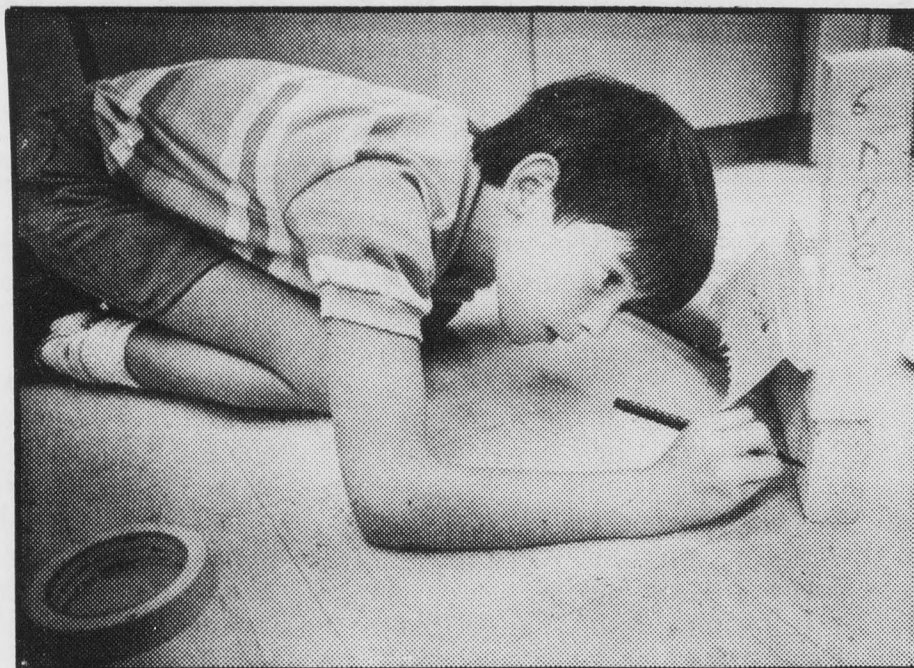

"We're combining map skills with writing. All the students are in teams. We went on a field trip and each team recorded their particular street stores on paper," Cowin said. "Then they came back here and started putting the street together. We'll hopefully interview store owners, too."

Despite the limited building tools used, students still had their share of headaches.

"Renae, I lost the sheet with the pictures on it," eight-year-old Heather Castleberry said with a worried look to a fellow classmate.

"Look in the pile of papers. It might be there," answered a semi-confident Renae Batchelor.

The "sheet with the pictures on it" was the students' building blueprints, an integral part of construction even when blocks are involved.

"I wanted them to notice that all the stores downtown are different," Cowin said.

More than 30 retail and specialty shops are housed in the center's three-block area bordered by A and D streets and First and Third avenues.

Not only will the students' work include interviews, but also a large-scale downtown map and the design of a new store to fill a north Second Avenue vacant lot.

Students spent the afternoon constructing the model. Then everyone sat back and evaluated the project so far.

"What's missing?" Cowin said.

"Trees," said one boy. "Cars," said another. "People," said yet another.

Landscaping is the class' task today. Downtown Upland has four tree planters. So will the model.

"And after that I want all of you to think about, if you were grown up, what kind of store you would want to build on that empty lot and what would you sell," Cowin said.

Family business is expanding beehive

By Suzanne Sproul

Richard Lewis feels at home in his small office tucked behind a complex off Mountain Avenue.

It's a beehive of activity but this kind of activity has been a part of his life for years.

Lewis directs Lewis Homes, one of the largest builders in California.

"Hi, I'm Richard Lewis," he says with a smile as he reaches out his hand.

"I personally think I get along well with most people, particularly the governmental officials I've dealt with during the years, because I've been here so long. I know people on a first-name basis and that makes it easier to deal with them," Lewis says while relaxing in an easy chair in his office.

Ralph and Goldy Lewis started the company in 1956 with a project called Claremont Highlands. They concentrated their early work in La Verne, Upland and Chino. Now, more than 22,000 homes later, the company has expanded into Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga.

Richard Lewis is in charge of the company's Southern and Northern California operations, which involve primarily the West Valley, the Palm Desert/Rancho Mirage and the Sacramento areas.

But when anyone enters the company's office, one of the first things he sees is a family portrait hanging on the east wall.

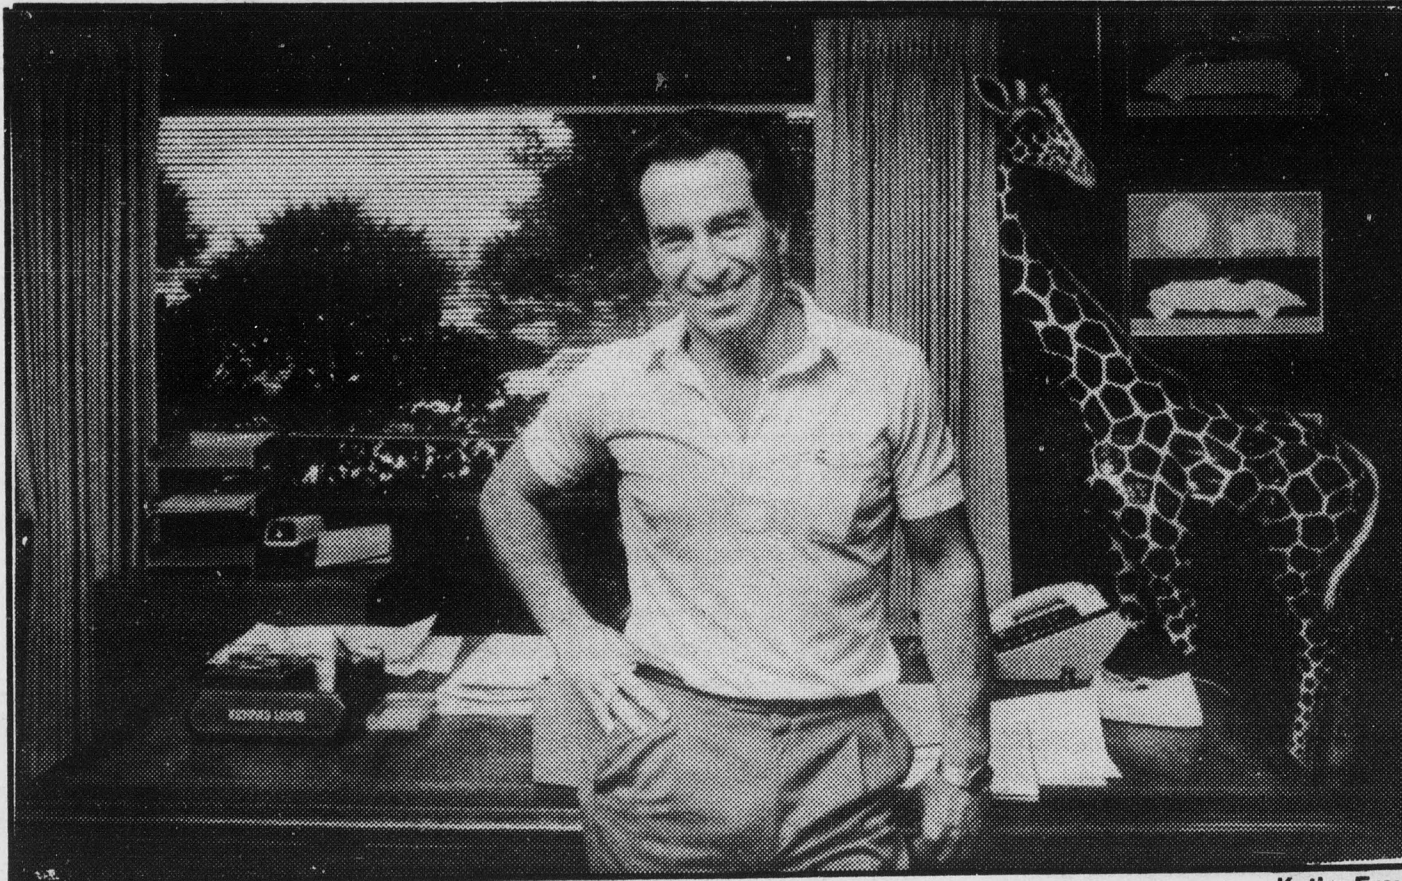

Surrounded by plaques and a picture of a small jet, is a framed photo of the company's founder;

his wife, Goldy; and their sons, Richard, Robert, Roger and Randall.

Lewis Homes is a family affair.

Robert Lewis heads the company's Nevada operations; Roger Lewis is a senior vice president and director of construction, purchasing and personnel; and Randall Lewis is a senior vice president and

Upland grants animal shelter $10,500

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland officials have granted the city's animal shelter $10,500 to get the project off dead center.

The council budgeted up to $25,000 for its animal control duties/shelter contribution earlier this year, although construction relies heavily upon community donations.

Marian Cochran, Promote Animal Safety and Welfare (PAWS) spokesperson, told the council the organization's efforts to construct the shelter hit an obstacle when the building slab became too difficult for local students to install.

PAWS was relying on volunteer work from the Baldy Regional Occupational Program, but the shelter's specially designed floor for the 3,500-square-foot facility is too intricate for the students, Cochran said.

The job needs a professional contractor and the job is expected to cost $10,500, she said.

"We need the help to go forward. A lot of work has been done and if it rains, all the work done will be lost," Cochran said.

PAWS has solicited and received $20,000 in goods and services from the community, she said.

PAWS members have estimated the building will cost $100,000.

The council approved reaffirming its commitment to the shelter by donating the $10,500.

State firm in stand against creation teaching

By Ed Camacho

If state and local school officials have their way, the battle between Genesis and Darwin will continue to be fought outside of science classes.

The state Department of Education is taking a firm stand against including divine creation alongside teachings of man evolving from lower life forms.

Last month, the state board of education rejected all of the new science books submitted for use in junior high schools because versions of evolution have been "watered down."

However, fundamentalists remain committed to having Adam and Eve taught together with Charles Darwin's "Origin of the Species."

"It's a slap in the face to me when the only thing the public schools teach is evolution," said George Groen, superintendent of the Ontario Christian School Association. "I would hate to believe my ancestry comes from some kind of fishy creature."

While public schools are dealing with the issue "as delicately as we can," it's likely creation will never be included in biology classes, said Robert Neely, assistant superintendent of educational services for the Fontana Unified School District.

"The theory of evolution has a scientific basis. Creation is not a theory. It's a belief. It's not a science," Neely said.

Debate between those believing in creation and evolution could resurface when school districts adopt new series of science books within the next two years.

All textbooks used by both private and public schools are approved by the state education department in six-year cycles, explained Francie Alexander, state textbook development director. Textbooks approved by the state are then placed on a

R.C. Council allows auto businesses along Foothill

By Patrick McGreevy

The Rancho Cucamonga City Council has determined what kind of businesses will be allowed to locate on Foothill Boulevard during an 18-month study to determine the long-range development standards for the city's major thoroughfare.

Council members agreed to allow automobile and truck sales businesses to locate on Foothill Boulevard but not to allow cemeteries and contractors yards during the interim period.

The council approved the urgency ordinance last week revising the measure from one previously recommended by the city's planning commission.

The ordinance, which became effective immediately, sets interim development standards for the Foothill Boulevard corridor while city planners study and develop permanent standards.

"I think that you've got a good base line now to get something started," said Jim Barton, the economic development director of the Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce.

The city's planning commission had originally recommended that automobile and truck sales and service businesses and tire stores be prohibited from developing in the corridor until the study determined whether they would be compatible with the long-term character of the developing roadway.

But the council, at the request of Councilman Jeff King, included automobile and truck businesses and tire stores in the list of businesses to be allowed on the street with a conditional use permit (CUP). Other businesses to be allowed with a CUP include pharmacies, carpenter shops and plumbing shops.

The vote approving the revised urgency ordinance was unanimous, with Councilwoman Pam Wright changing her vote from one previously of opposition but saying she still had misgivings.

Wright argued two weeks ago, when the planning commission's recommendations were first considered, that the commission had wanted to ban automobile and truck businesses from the boulevard until the study was complete because it did not think it had sufficient guidelines for allowing such businesses with a CUP.

Under the urgency ordinance process, the City Council will have to hold a public hearing on the progress of the corridor study in 45 days, according to City Attorney Jim Markman. Two weeks after the hearing, the council may extend the interim development policies for another two years or until the study is completed, whichever comes first.

The interim and final policy apply to the stretch of Foothill Boulevard from the westerly city limits to Haven Avenue and another stretch between the Devore Freeway and East Avenue.

In other action, the council gave its first reading to an ordinance that would amend the Etiwanda Specific Plan by realigning an equestrian trail near the Victoria planned community.

The trail previously was along Victoria Parklane from north to south.

list for selection by local school districts.

Alexander said the science textbooks submitted for use in the new cycle were turned down because no new information on evolution was included.

"It's not what was there, it's what wasn't there," Alexander said recently by telephone from Sacramento. "There was no updated information about findings made in the last few decades. The books didn't even get into this century."

The decision to reject the science books reflects efforts by state Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig to "promote quality education," Alexander said. However, she added, Honig's push for higher emphasis on evolution has drawn criticism from fundamentalist groups.

Since textbooks will eventually be selected on the local level, Kathleen Brugger, trustee for the Ontario-Montclair School District, argued the debate should be made within each community.

"It almost has to be made on an individual level," said Brugger, who is also president of the California School Board Association. "The issue really depends on what the individual school districts decide."

Brugger said she agrees discussion on creation in public schools should include concerns over separation of state and church.

That constitutional separation, however, would not be infringed by presenting all theories of mankind's beginnings, Groen said.

"To me, it's not a question of Darwin or evolution. It's the basic question of what is truth," Groen said. "We have a saying here that goes, 'we only teach one way and that's the gospel truth.'"

By limiting discussion to evolution, Groen added, "the kids will take it as fact. Not teaching creation (in the public school system) is just irresponsible."

Neely agreed "truth" should be emphasized in science textbooks. "I do believe creation should be discussed and people have the freedom to discuss it. But I don't believe creation should be presented in science classes," Neely said.

Instead of expanding science studies to include creation, students in the Chino Unified School District have seen more emphasis placed on evolution, said Mary Louise Labrucherie, assistant superintendent for educational services.

"A textbook is not a perfect document. No textbook is perfect. We need to supplement (the textbook) with other documentation," Labrucherie said.

Cartoon map of R.C. introduced

Giant slices of pepperoni pizza and 20-foot-tall gladiolas have joined potholes as hazards motorists should look out for when traveling Rancho Cucamonga streets.

At least they may be thought to be hazards if a motorist took a new map of the city literally.

The cartoon map of Rancho Cucamonga has caricatures of 50 local businesses including the giant pizza slice sprawled in front of Royal Pizza.

The poster-size map was drawn by Ben Bull, a graphic artist at Chaffey Community College in Rancho Cucamonga, and will be given away or sold by the businesses who signed up to be on it.

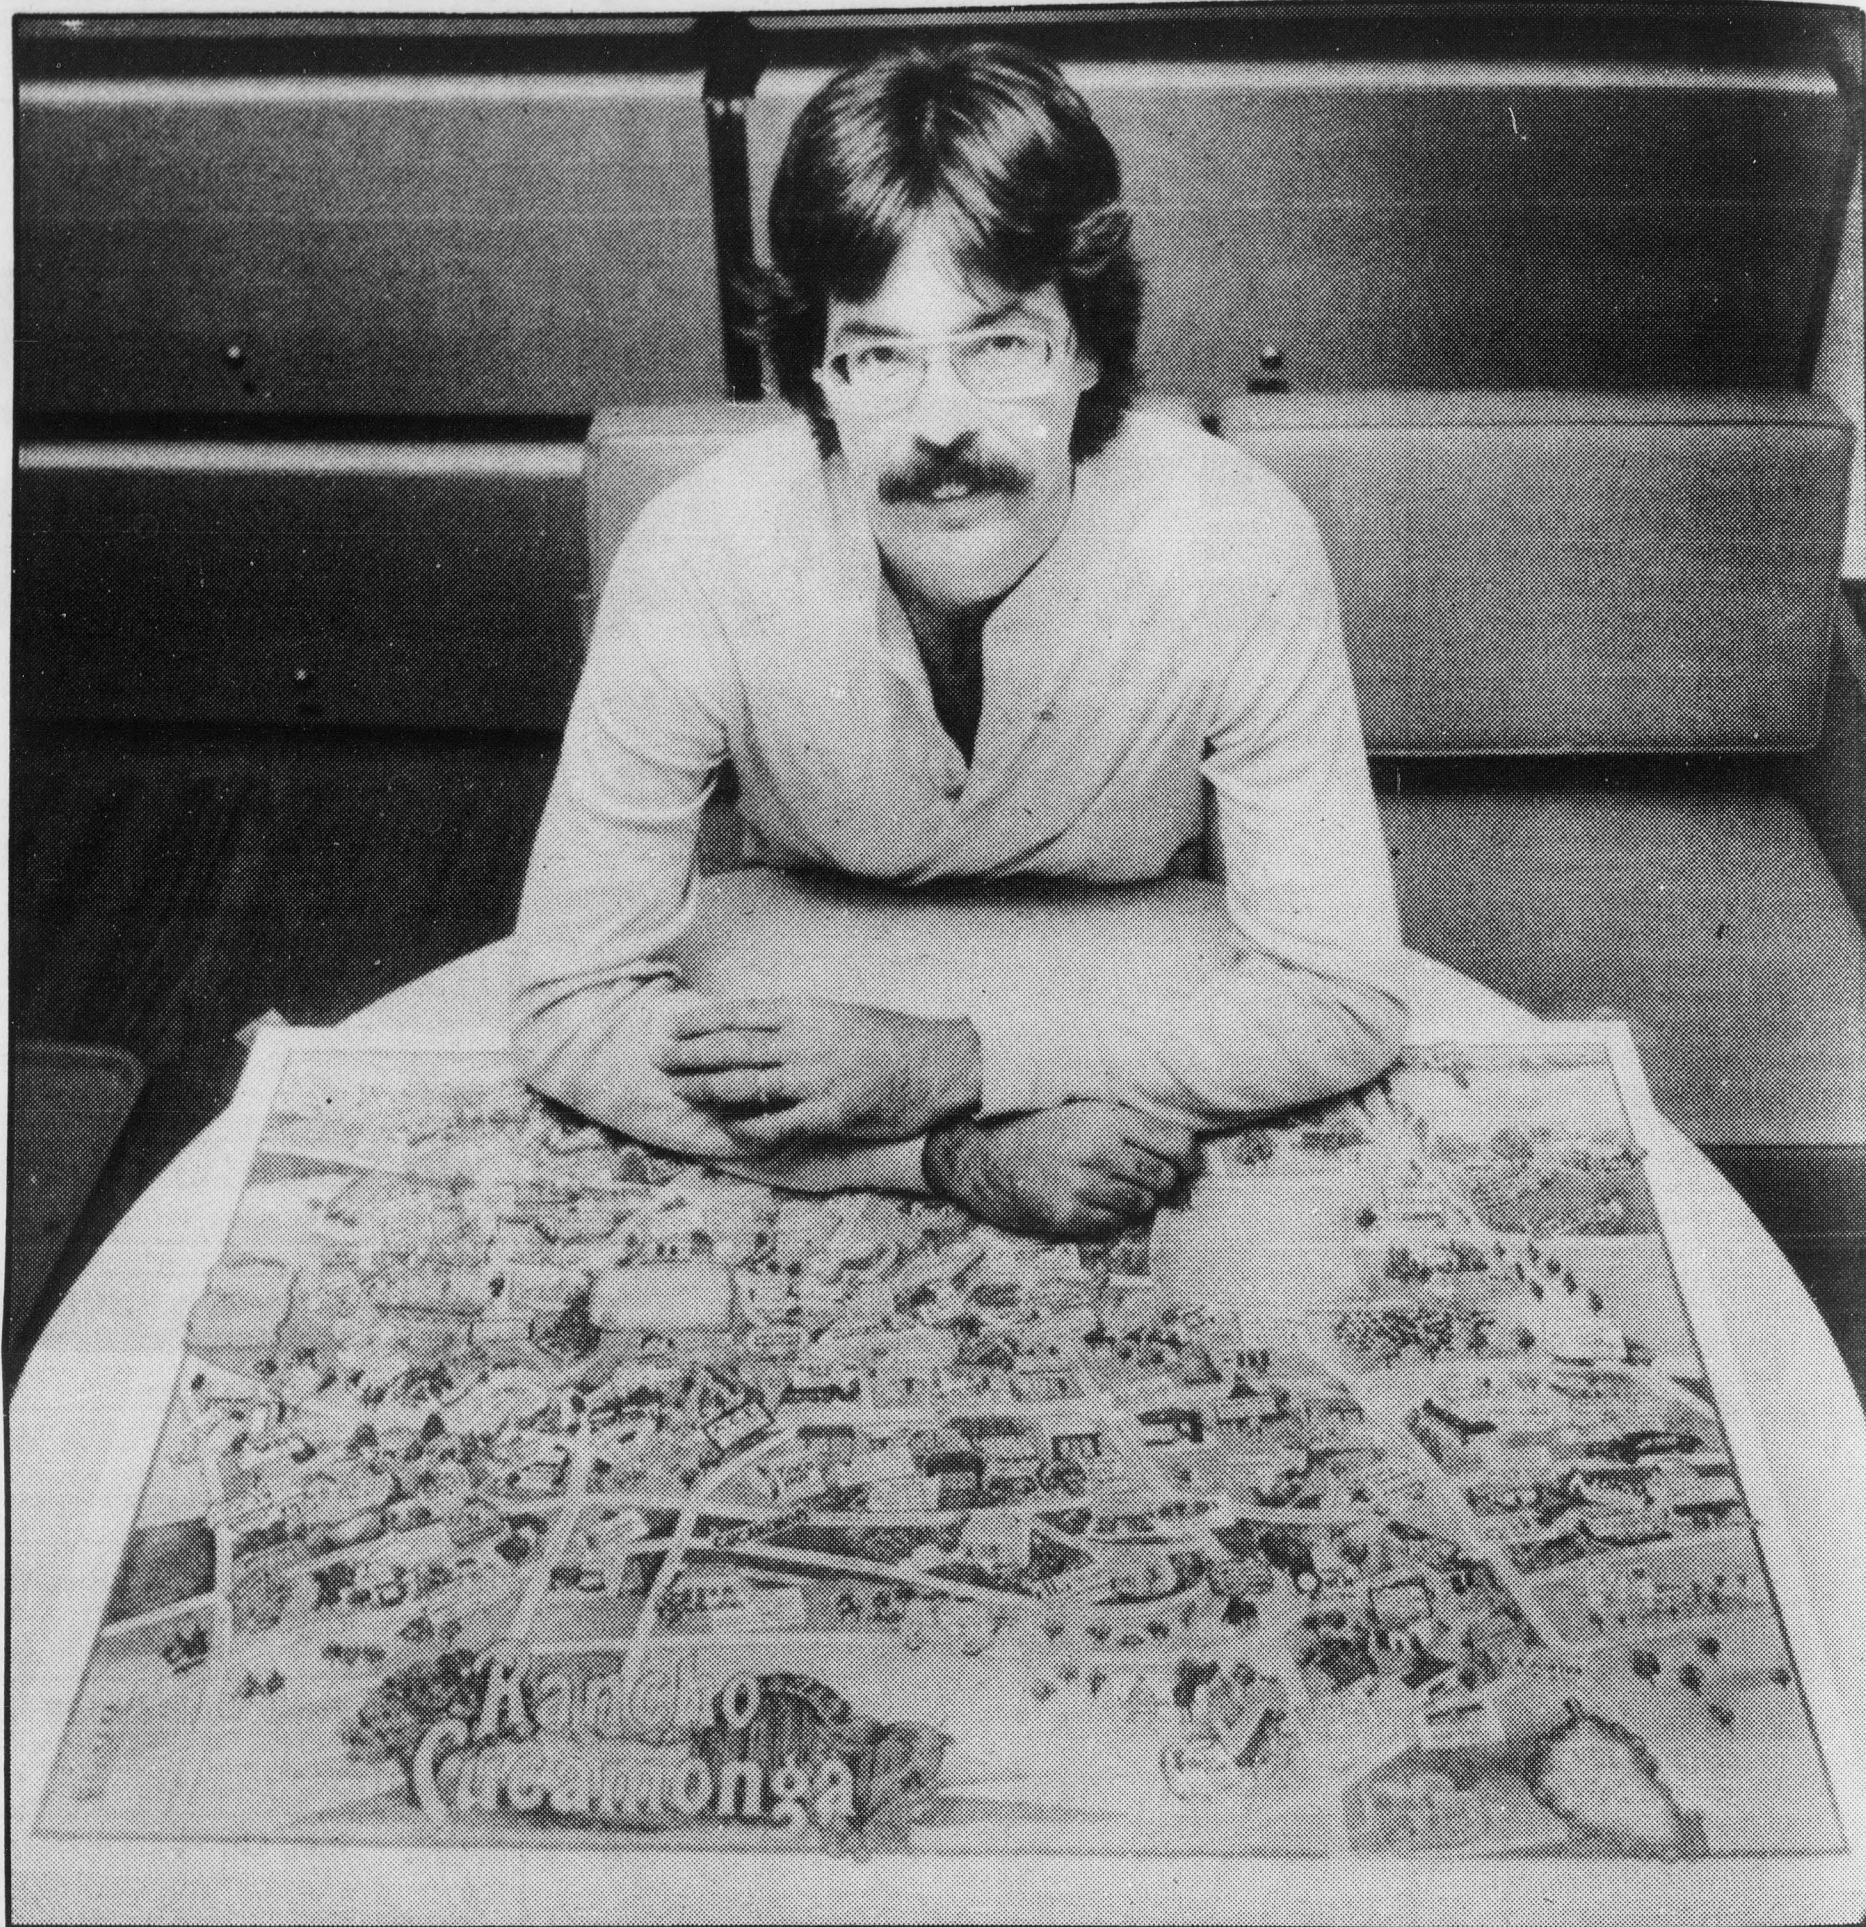

Ranlee Publishing of Costa Mesa sold the local businesses on the idea and secured the sanction of the Chamber of Commerce last May.

"It's been months of holy hell putting it together," Bull said. "But it was also fun to do, to get all of the information together in a halfway nice looking way."

The map shows the businesses protruding off their streets, with a cartoon character representing their business on which the business name and telephone number are written.

For instance, Royal Pizza has the slice of pizza as big as the building it rests against. Dean's Bear Gulch Tire Service has Gentle Ben the bear on his hind legs holding a tire. On a nearby road, a truck with a huge steaming soup pot and ladle sticking out represents the Happy Cooker Catering. A hot-air balloon floats over the

Input sought in cable rate request

By Suzanne Sproul

More customer input is needed before a Foothills Cablevision Inc.'s proposed rate increase can be considered, according to the Upland City Council.

Councilman Frank Carpenter asked for a postponement after no one spoke against or in favor of the increase during the public hearing two weeks ago.

Although the company only serves 160 Upland residents, primarily in homes above 19th Street, Carpenter said he wanted Foothills Cablevision to notify customers of the proposal.

Foothills Cablevision

Operations Manager J.B. Bush said post cards will be mailed to all customers notifying them of possible rate changes.

The public hearing is rescheduled for Oct. 21.

Upland City Council members oversee rate-setting fees for the company, as well as grant service franchises.

Foothills Cablevision is owned by Denver-based Daniels and Associates Ltd. and has operated in Upland since March.

Bush told the council his company wants to "restructure" its current fees. The basic service fees would change from $6.95 and $8.95 per month to $12.95 per month, which includes the converter cost.

"For too long our predecessors ignored serving the customers," Bush said.

Foothills Cablevision bought the system from Acton Cable Television.

The company already has invested $200,000 in its Upland operations. Company personnel have analyzed and upgraded the system during the last five months, according to Bush.

A new phone system also was installed so customers could more easily contact the company, he said.

Bush said Foothills Cablevision now is concentrating on an

"addressability" phase, which would allow the company to service repairs over the phone.

Customers could call in their complaints and the company could make the necessary repairs without sending out personnel.

Foothills Cablevision also is adding new services including Cinemax, American Movie Classics and Prime Ticket, a regional sports network.

Those premium services would cost $9.50, he said.

"I believe that is a price the market can handle and we can handle," the manager said.

Animal group to sponsor 5K run

Promote Animal Welfare and Safety (PAWS) supporters are sponsoring a 5K run Oct. 26 in Upland.

Registration can be done by mail before Oct. 17 or in person the day of the race. The cost is $10 with a T-shirt or $5 without one. Forms are available at Millers Outpost Stores and most sporting goods stores in Upland. Forms also are available from PAWS by calling 946-1802, Monday through Friday.

After Oct. 17, though, the cost is $12 with a T-shirt or $6 without one.

In addition to the run, PAWS is sponsoring a 2K animal walk. Pets will be required to be leashed.

EDUCATION

Deer Canyon PTA carnival is Oct. 26

The Deer Canyon Elementary School PTA will sponsor at Halloween carnival Oct. 26.

The children can dress up in Halloween costumes and come to the school grounds at 10225 Hamilton St., Rancho Cucamonga.

The carnival will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In addition to booths and games, the county sheriff's deputies from the Rancho Cucamonga substation will be on hand to fingerprint children from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Several among merit scholars

Some 15,000 high school seniors, representing outstanding young men and women in all of the 50 states, were named as Semifinalists in the 31st annual Merit Program. National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which conducts the competition, publicly recognizes this select group of students in order to honor their academic talents and broaden their higher education opportunities.

Semifinalists have completed the first step in the competition for about 5,800 Merit Scholarships, worth nearly $21 million, to be awarded next spring.

Local students include: Matthew S. Cisternino from Chino High School; Gerald S. Macala from Alta Loma High School; Lauren K. Heyns from Montclair High School; Jennifer Roossien from Chaffey High School; Lorraine C. Atilano from Ontario High School; Franklin J. Bruno, Michael J. Cheever, Steven G.

Clinard, Wade N. McMullen and Geoffrey S. Smith, all from Upland High School.

Liz Gallarini named to AAUW state post

Liz Gallarini, member of the Alta Loma Elementary School District Board of Trustees, has been appointed to serve the California Division of the American Association of University Women in dual educational roles for the 1985-86 year.

Gallarini will serve as the education area representative for the division as well as its task force chairman for the public support for public education issue.

Gallarini has been a member of the Ontario-Upland Branch of the AAUW since 1974.

Valencia students to hold math-a-thon

Valencia School students in Upland need community donations for their first math-a-thon, according to Mary Davidson, publicity chairman.

Students will collect pledges next week. Students will take various math tests Oct. 23 and pledges are based on the number of correct answers.

Children will supply their test scores to those who pledged. Students are encouraged to approach only people they know, Davidson said.

Proceeds will finance the purchase of computer sets, printers and software.

High school students' SAT results told

By Ed Camacho
and Matt Coker

West Valley high school students showed mixed results on the 1984-85 Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), generally scoring below state and national averages.

Scores for students in the Chino and Fontana school districts showed little or no improvement from the previous year. Students in the Chaffey Joint Union High School District earned slightly higher marks on the SAT, which colleges and universities use as part of their eligibility process.

However, officials said the SAT scores should not be used to judge the effectiveness of their curriculum.

"Everyone likes to see higher scores," said Jerry Richardson, coordinator of testing for the Fontana Unified School District. "But we must remember that this test is a good way to measure the general aptitude of those college-bound students — not what the students learned in high school."

Christine Rice, assistant superintendent for administrative services, presented the SAT results for the Chino Unified School District last week to the board of trustees. Rice said low scores by district students do not mean recent changes in curriculum have failed.

"I think there's a good chance, with the things that are going on, that (scores are) going to come up year after year," Rice said.

Results from better curriculum have already paid dividends for students in the Chaffey district, which continued a string of five years of improvement on SAT scores.

"They were good. Better. Improving," said Bette Harrison, the district's assistant superintendent of instruction. "There's been a concentrated effort on the part of all persons involved in the system. The standardized test reflects that effort."

Like the statewide averages, SAT scores jumped in the Chaffey district. Individual scores for each of its district's seven high schools have not been given yet, but Harrison said districtwide scores averaged 423 for the verbal section of the test and 476 for the mathematics portion.

During the 1983-84 school year, scores for Chaffey district students averaged 414 for verbal skills and 474 for mathematics.

On the verbal section, the 1984-85 score for district boys averaged out at 430, while the girls registered a 418 average. In math, boys came up with a 505 average, while girls achieved a 452 average.

Chaffey's scores were only slightly lower than the statewide averages, which were 424 in verbal skills and 480 in mathematics.

Nationally, high school students registered a 431 average in verbal skills and a 475 average in math.

"We're coming very close to the medium," Harrison said.

Scores had not changed significantly among the Fontana Unified School District students who took the test, Richardson said.

Fontana High School student averaged 391 on the verbal section, the same as the previous year. District boys taking the SAT averaged 385 on the verbal while girls scored an average of 390.

Scores in the math section declined from last year's average of 438 down to 436. Boys outscored girls on the math section by averaging 478 to the girls' average of 412.

A better way to find out how Fontana students are doing in the classroom will come from district scores in the California Assessment Program (CAP) tests, Richardson said. The CAP tests measure a student in more subjects than the SAT, he said, thus identifying areas the district needs to improve.

Scores from Chino High

School represented a "very slight" drop from the previous year, Rice said. Comparisons for Don Lugo High School scores have not been made yet, she added.

In the verbal section, boys from Chino averaged 415, while girls had an average of 407.

Overall, the district had an average of 411 on the verbal.

The district average on the math section was 460 with boys averaging 495 and girls' 431.

Rice said Chino educators will be trying to encourage more seniors to take the tests in the future.

West Valley water plant gets backing

By Suzanne Sproul

Five agencies planning to build a $34.7 million West Valley water treatment plant have committed themselves financially to the project.

Representatives from Chino, the Monte Vista Water District, Ontario, San Bernardino County and Upland signed the necessary financial agreements needed before construction of the plant can begin.

With lots of pomp and circumstance — even a large layer cake to celebrate the occasion — the representatives signed each of a required 16 documents sealing the deal.

Participants have discussed the project for at least the past five years. Certificates of appreciation will be given to John McCarthy, former Upland mayor, and Bob Ellingwood, current Ontario mayor. Both served as chairmen of the Water Facilities Authority-Joint Powers Agency during the group's formation and the start of work on the project.

Emmett Lowry, WFA-JPA manager, said the document signing commits all five participants to the project.

"The project will be financed through revenue bonds. The bonds will be sold Tuesday and then we will have the money," Lowry said. "Construction is expected during the spring of 1986."

According to Lowry, the following is a breakdown of the financial commitment of each participant: Chino, $4.2 million; Monte Vista Water District, $5.2 million; Ontario, $10.5 million; San Bernardino County Waterworks District No. 8 serving Chino Hills, $5.2 million; and Upland, $10.5 million.

The amount each participant is selling in bonds is based upon the amount of water each will receive, WFA-JPA officials said.

San Bernardino County supervisors, acting as the governing board of Waterworks District No. 8, agreed this week to pay almost $3.8 million to help finance the project.

The county will participate in the project although Chino Hills residents actually will receive its future water from the La Verne Weymouth treatment plant.

The Cucamonga County Water District and Three Valleys Municipal Water District, WFA-JPA members, aren't participating in the project.

Lowry said the breakdown covers the cost of the plant.

The plant, located at 18th Street and Benson Avenue in Upland, will have a 34 million gallon per day capacity.

"The engineers working on the project are finishing up the design of the plant," the WFA-JPA manager said Friday.

Boosting the Eagles

Except for the players and coaches, the members of the Etiwanda Athletic Booster Club are usually the first to arrive at a football game and the last to leave.

They are the parents and fans selling programs at the gate, cooking hotdogs at the snack bar, merchandizing T-shirts and offering raffle tickets for a dollar.

This year, all the activity is aimed at raising $12,000 for a new weight-lifting center for Etiwanda High School's athletes. There is little time for the 40 boosters to socialize during all the effort.

"The people who are involved have all known each other for two or three years, so this is mostly for the kids," said Barry Pitts, the president of the high school's booster club.

Two years ago, with 70 members, the boosters club raised $12,000 of which $1,300 came from operation of the snack bar where soda pop, hot dogs and popcorn are sold.

This year, with fewer members, the snack bar proceeds are being supplemented by the sale of long-sleeved T-shirts with the school's mascot, the eagle, on one side and circles with the name of the school and depictions of the eight sports on the other side.

Additional money is being raised through a raffle in which a Honda motorscooter is being given away. Tickets are $1 each and also give the buyer $2 off at Pizza Hut and 10 percent off purchases at Chick's Sporting Goods in Upland.

The booster's are talking about holding Bingo games as well.

The goal is to raise enough money to build and equip a weight-lifting room on campus.

"We're hoping to get a volunteer business to lay the 60 by 60 (foot) slab and to put up a 40 by 60 foot temporary building," Pitts said.

Pitts also hopes to raise enough money this year to buy some timing clocks and scorecards for the wrestling team, he said.

Like most of the parents in the boosters club, Pitts has a son involved in athletics. Tom Pitts is an offensive and defensive guard on the football team.

The boosters club is important to the school district, which cannot afford to buy all the equipment the athletic teams could use according to Etiwanda's Principal, Don Culp.

"The athletic boosters are essential to provide a quality program," Culp said. "With restricted budgets at the school we're not in a position to provide the resources to field a comprehensive program. We simply could not offer the programs without them."

"I feel it (booster club) has been very important," said Freshman Football Coach Frank DiCraato. "We need that. We need the support the athletic boosters are giving."

Comments about Upland rent control sought

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland city officials will consider community comment about a proposed mobile home park rent control ordinance Oct. 29.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in City Hall.

City Attorney Don Maroney reviewed and refined the ordinance to include a provision allowing for council review if park owners or tenants disagreed with an arbitrator's decision involving rent increases.

Park owners also can include the present market value of the mobile home property to justify any increases, Maroney said in the ordinance.

"There are many areas in which some amendments could be made without offending the constitutionality of the ordinance ... I would be glad to have any suggestions that you wish to make either for the purpose of making the ordinance more understandable or more workable for those who are going to function within its framework," the city attorney wrote in a cover letter to the proposal.

Despite the minor changes, Maroney said he believes the ordinance, if approved, should hold up in court.

The council asked for the changes because of a recent state Supreme Court decision against an ordinance from the city of Westminster.

The court ruled the Orange County city placed too much authority in the hands of an arbitrator to handle rent disputes. The proposed Upland ordinance relies exclusively on the use of an arbitrator.

Conclusions and findings by the arbitrator in any case are binding, but owners or tenants can appeal the decision to the council within 10 days.

The council would consider the appeal within a month, the proposal said.

Council members originally considered using a seven-member citizens commission to handle disputes, but the idea was abandoned.

According to the proposed ordinance, tenants and park owners first would conduct "meet and confer" sessions in hopes of solving any problems. If the sessions fail, either party then could ask for an arbitrator.

Tenants and owners would share the cost of arbitration.

The public hearing for the proposal comes three years after city officials began discussing rent control.

Obstacles slow drive for petitions

By Patrick McGreevy

A group circulating petitions for an initiative to require all Rancho Cucamonga assessment districts to receive approval of two-thirds of the city's voters had to work doubly hard to collect the first 120 signatures.

In addition, one circulator was mistakenly forced off city property late last week when she tried to collect signatures from residents at the senior citizen lunch program.

Organizers learned last week that the initiative on which approximately 120 hundred signatures were gathered was technically faulty and had to be fixed.

The signatures collected on the faulty petitions were tossed out and had to be recollected as organizers lost precious time in their attempt to qualify the measure for the June 1986 ballot.

Cucamonga Citizens Coalition- Political Action Committee (CCC-PAC) must collect approximately 4,500 signatures of registered voters in the next 100 days to qualify the initiative for the ballot.

The political group was formed to oppose a vote by the City Council May 17 to create a benefit assessment district to finance the construction of two new city parks.

The district would issue bonds for the parks and gradually retire the bonds by charging an average of $34.65 for single family residential properties within a three-mile radius of the two parks.

If the voters approve the initiative, a two-thirds vote would be required to approve the recently created park assessment district and all future assessments.

Normally, a group would have 180-days to collect the signatures of 15 percent of the city's registered voters but CCC-PAC wanted to qualify the initiative for the June ballot, so it has agreed to a shortened period

Upland council asked to fund downtown study

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland City Council members have been asked to pay $5,000 so an economic development corporation can study the rejuvenation of the downtown.

City Manager Lee Travers said consultant Bob Clayton of Orange County brought the corporation idea to the City Council for consideration.

A representative from Clayton's Orange County firm discussed plans to spruce up the three-block town center with city and Upland Chamber of Commerce officials.

Cooperation between all downtown property owners is needed to avoid a piecemeal renovation project, the consultant said.

But $5,000 is needed up front.

Details about the corporation and its exact benefits to the downtown are sketchy. Clayton was unavailable for comment.

Although receptive to the idea of sprucing up the center, council members said they needed more time to review the request.

"I welcome a stab at this proposal," Councilwoman Dina Hunter said, but the idea needs more review.

The idea will be brought back to the council during a special Oct. 15 meeting.

"It's time the business community began moving downtown Upland into the 20th Century," Councilman Bob Nolan said.

Councilman Frank Carpenter also endorsed the project.

"I've been impressed. I hope the outcome is as bright as they're going into this thing with," Carpenter said.

Downtown Upland is bordered by A to D streets and First and Third avenues. It's home to more than 30 retail and specialty shops, including some of the oldest businesses in the city.

A Clayton firm engineer already outlined various funding mechanisms potentially available for the job. He told city officials and merchants federal loans and community block grants might be used.

Retail competition from neighbors Rancho Cucamonga and Montclair has hurt the downtown, city and chamber officials agreed.

Dean Love, longtime downtown merchant and Upland Town Center Merchant Association member, said he is aware of proposals to spruce up the center. But he said he wasn't aware of plans to approach the council.

"I went to the council meeting Monday to find out something about the proposal," he said. "I can tell you about what I dream of for the downtown area but I don't know what is included in this latest proposal."

R.C. supports bid for police athletic contest

By Patrick McGreevy

The Rancho Cucamonga City Council has given its support to a proposal to bring the California State Police Athletic Federation Olympics to the West Valley in 1987.

The council voted Oct. 2 to contribute up to $1,500 for preparing to bid for the second largest amateur athletic contest in the world to the area.

Council members also agreed to write a letter of support for the San Bernardino County Sheriff Department's bid to host the games.

The games are expected to draw 5,000 police officers to compete in 43 events.

With up to 25,000 friends and supporters expected to accompany the competitors, and 40,000 local residents expected as spectators, the seven-day event is predicted to generate up to $5 million in revenue for the local communities that host it, according to Sheriff's Deputy Richard Brown.

The size of the competition has made it the second largest amateur athletic event in the world, ahead of the Pan Am Games and the European Games, but still behind the Olympic Games, Brown said.

He told the City Council last week that his department plans to be one of three agencies to submit bids for the games at an organizational meeting scheduled for December in Newport Beach.

The sheriff's department proposes to locate the sporting events in Chino, Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario, Montclair and Upland as well as the Glen Helen, Prado and Cucamonga-Guasti regional parks, Brown said.

If San Bernardino County wins the bidding it would hold several events in Rancho Cucamonga. Brown said badminton competition would be held at Etiwanda High School, basketball at Alta Loma High School and Chaffey College, cross country and swimming at Chaffey College, cycling on Rancho Cucamonga's streets and the 30K road race on the streets of Rancho Cucamonga and Ontario.

The San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department will be bidding against Stockton and a team consisting of Kern County and the Bakersfield Police Department, Brown said.

To impress the judges of the bids, Brown said his department will have to spend up to $15,000 on a multimedia presentation including $10,000 on a film showing the venues in the West Valley.

The San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors has endorsed the bid and agreed to contribute up to $5,000 as matching funds against money contributed by the West Valley cities.

Without much comment, but with apparent enthusiasm, the Rancho Cucamonga City Council agreed to contribute up to $1,500 toward preparation of the bid.

Although receptive to the idea of hosting several Police Olympics events, Upland City Council members Monday decided to further review a sheriff's department request for $1,500.

If the West Valley is awarded the games, Upland will host such events as pocket billiards, track and field and basketball.

The council said it would answer the department's request during a special Oct. 15 meeting.

Sheriff's deputies have not yet appeared before the city councils of Montclair or Ontario to secure their endorsements.

Two art exhibits open in Claremont

By D. WADE BOOTH
Staff Writer

The art galleries of the Claremont Colleges have swung wide their doors to kick off what's described as an exhibition season expected by curators to be "crowded, exiting and very well attended."

Art enthusiasts and amateurs will enjoy what's described by students and instructors as "images designed to stimulate imagination," said Marjorie Beebe, gallery director.

"People have the perception that somehow exhibitions hang themselves," said Beebe.

To the contrary, however, a lot of hard work goes into gallery preparations.

Each time a new exhibit is installed, an atmosphere must be created. Lights must be rehung; new paint and plaster need to be meticulously applied to walls.

Everything separate from the art must look, itself, like it a masterpiece.

Now open and running through the first week of November are two exhibits.

One at Pomona College's Montgomery Gallery, organized by the American Federation of Arts, includes some photographs never before displayed.

"The Photography of Imogen Cunningham: A Centennial Selection" includes vintage prints from the photographer's career.

Cunningham, who died in 1976 at the age of 93, is acclaimed for her sensitive portraits, soft undertones and dramatic lighting effects.

The second exhibit will be at the Lang Gallery.

Participants in this year's exhibition deal with subjects ranging from abstract and bizarre to conservative contemporary.

Jim Fuller, chairman of the Scripps art department, displays his watercolor's simply depicting "Plain old rocks."

Directional lighting and careful arrangement created what he describes as perception of "permanence and change."

"Rocks," he said, "are symbolic of change, longevity and immortality."

Most instructors, said Beebe, contribute four or five works to the exhibit.

Other works include, those of Alan Blizzard, Neda Al-Hilali, Christine Bertelson, Gary Geraths and Paul Darrow.

Shows upcoming this year include a variety of artists and styles.

Two shows running Nov. 17 through Dec. 30 in the Montgomery and Lang galleries include a survey of "colorform" works by 10 of California's most inspired 20th Century abstract artists, and the art of the Japanese Kimono artists.

A mixture of both historic and American art will fill the walls of galleries throughout the year.

Both galleries are open seven days a week from 1-5 p.m. They're located on the Scripps campus near Ninth Street and Columbia Way.

WINE TALK

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

"Whereas Burgundy is King and Claret is Queen, and Champagne is a gay old multimillionaire, the Maid of Honor from the Rhone Valley is not above sitting with you on a grassy bank and adding magic to a lunch of bread and cheese."

Julian Street in "Wines," 1933 Ask a wine lover what his greatest wine experiences were and likely as not he'll tell you it was with red Burgundies or red Bordeaux (called Claret in London).

But ask a wine lover whether he'd prefer to consume a young Burgundy or Bordeaux or a 20-year-old red Rhone, regardless of vintage, and the knowledgeable sipper will opt for the latter.

Rhones aged carefully until mid-life and beyond can be glorious. They become complex, with a slight hint of orange peel in the aroma, faint tones of cedar and nutmeg hovering in the neighborhood, and a taste that is silky and glorious — perfect for a peasant lunch.

Yet these Rhones are unpleasant beasts when they are young. They are not terribly likable soon after they are released. Young, they taste sour, bitter, acrid and coarse. They challenge the roof of the mouth, assault the palate and make you wonder what you have done to yourself, and if it's curable.

Yet with a bit of bottle age they take on a finesse undefinable. Julian Street wrote, "It can almost be said that no (other) wine improves so much in the bottle. They need at least 10 years to lose their hardness and reach balance, and better 15 than 10."

Gerard Jaboulet lifted his glass and took a sniff. His eyes closed, and he took a sip, and then he let out a long, satisfying "Ahh." It was clearly no act; the man loves his wine.

As the owner, proprietor and dominant force of Paul Jaboulet Aine, this man makes arguably the best red Rhone wines, and he probably drinks more red Rhones — his and his neighbors' — than anyone. So for him to grow ecstatic over a wine he has known since it was born may seem like a performance intended to impress the local wine columnist.

Yet spending a bit of time with Gerard, it's clear he is constantly amazed by his own creations. He relishes the wine — as it tastes alone and how it matches with good food; he balloons with pride at another's excitement over his handiwork. And yet he still praises his neighbors and keeps in perspective the fact that this is, after all, just a glass of wine, not a cosmic experience to be discussed in hushed tones and 25-cent words.

The surprising thing about Jaboulet's exclamations of greatness is that the wine he was tasting at this particular moment of passion was his 1983 Jaboulet Hermitage La Chapelle, not some ancient, elegant, nearly decadent bottle.

Yes, he admitted, drinking a 1983 wine at this early stage was infanticide, yet he wanted to display the charms of the vintage.

The 1983 harvest was a monumental one in terms of quality throughout most of France, and in the Rhone it yielded wines of such concentration, power and richness that even in a wine as young as the La Chapelle, I could tell: This was a wine to lay away and hold onto for the prescribed period.

"The '78 was super. But this wine has more fruit, more elegance," said Jaboulet. "This wine is rich, like the '61. The '78 has more power, but this wine.

..." He sipped again.

"I never open these kinds of wines in less than 10 years. If I drink them at eight years, I must have it with strong cheese, never with food."

To be sure, at $25 a bottle, this is expensive wine, but considering it's probably the best wine made in all of the Rhone, it may be thought of as a value.

Moreover, the wine is in such high demand around the world that it's on strict allocation. Jaboulet and even some of his neighbors recognize Hermitage La Chapelle as the greatest achievement of the Rhone, and the word has gotten to wine lovers in London, Brussels, Paris, Amsterdam.

For a less expensive glimpse into the style of wine this is, try the 1983 Jaboulet Saint-Joseph "Le Grand Pompee" ($8). The amazing thing about this wine — the baby brother of Hermitage, made from the same variety of grape (syrah) — is that few people outside France have ever heard of it.

"Ten years ago, there were only 3,500 hectoliters (about 90,000 gallons), of Saint-Joseph made, but today there are 20,000 hectoliters (more than a half million gallons)."

The increase, he said, was due to the realization that the steep slopes of Saint-Joseph, where tractors cannot go, produce great wine. And the 1983 Jaboulet Saint-Joseph is exceptional — peppery, rich and laden with Far East scents, but smooth on the palate.

A third find was Jaboulet's 1983 Crozes-Hermitage, another cousin of the famed La Chapelle.

"This is the best we have ever done in Crozes-Hermitage," said Jaboulet, sipping.

At $10, it is excellent value, with a deep, rich, complex syrah taste.

Concert at Fontana Inn is benefit for Kids Inc.

By ED CAMACHO
Staff Writer

A lineup of country and rock groups will be featured at a benefit concert Saturday at the Fontana Inn.

Proceeds from the concert will go to Kids Inc., the Palm-Springs based children's newsletter. Benefit organizer Mario Gonzales said he hopes to raise between $8,000 and $9,000 for the non-profit organization.

"We think we have a very attractive lineup," said Gonzales, who owns G&F Landscape and Lawn Service in Fontana. "We need to sell lots of tickets, so we hoping for a big draw at the door."

Kids Inc., which has a distribution center in Fontana, provides information on missing children, teenage drug and alcohol abuse, molestation and other services.

The group receives no federal funds and relies on private donations to produce its 55,000 editions of the newsletter, said Kids Inc. representative Winnie McClain.

The concert was initiated after the kidnapping and murder of 10-year-old Melissa Lynn Wakefield of Fontana. A neighbor of Wakefield, Brian Keith Smith, is awaiting for trial on charges he murdered the young girl.

Originally, the benefit was to include a carnival in the parking lot between the Fontana Inn and Brunton Auditorium. But Gonzales said those plans fell through.

Instead, the concert was given a broader emphasis to attract a wider audience, Gonzales said.

Headlining the benefit will be the group War II, composed of members of the old War band. The show also will feature country singers Jack Lox, Sonny Martin and Little Joe Shaver. The rock groups Frenchie, Destiny and Sound Project also will perform.

Actress Nedra Volz from the television show "The Fall Guy" also will make an appearance at the show. A representative for Sen. Rubin Ayala, D-Chino, will attend the benefit, and Fontana teacher Ben Upton will give a presentation on protecting children.

Reserved tickets for the show are $25 a couple and $15 for individuals. Tickets at the door will be $30 per couple and $20 for single tickets.

For more information, call the Fontana Inn at 823-2002. The Fontana Inn is located at 9420 Sierra Ave.

Feminism-biblical faith link is topic of lecture

"Feminism and Biblical Faith" will be the theme of the annual Knopf-Hill Lecture to be given by Dr. Phyllis Tribble at the School of Theology at Claremont on Tuesday, Oct. 23, at 10:30 a.m. in the Mudd Auditorium.

Tribble is the Baldwin Professor of Sacred Literature at Union Theological Seminary, New York and is internationally known as an Old Testament scholar and as a leader in relating the feminist concerns to the Biblical Faith.

She has published two books and many articles in these areas.

The Knopf-Hill Lecture commemorates the work of two professors in Biblical studies during the years that the School of Theology at Claremont was a part of the University of Southern California. The School is beginning its 10th year this fall.

The public is welcome to the lecture without charge.

Claremont membership tea slated

The annual Membership Tea of the Elsie Hirsch Chapter of the City of Hope, will be held Tuesday at noon at the home of Mrs. Mickey Ross, 191 E. Fairfield, Claremont.

Guest speaker will be Jules

Conference on women's potential

Helping women to realize their potential by investing in themselves and the future is the theme of the 1985 Fall Conference sponsored by the California Division of the American Association of University Women, Oct. 18-20 at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel in Universal City.

Four broad areas for discussion in workshop sessions are scheduled during the conference, covering over 37 issues affecting contemporary women locally and internationally. Among the wide range of subjects are the United Nations and its recent forum in Nairobi culminating the U.N. decade for women.

Reservations for AAUW's Fall Conference can be made by contacting the AAUW California Division's Office, 909 12th St., Suite 114, Box 2, Sacramento, Calif. 95814, (916) 448-7795. For more information, call (213) 530-1377.

Supervisors approve festival to benefit Vietnam veterans

SAN BERNARDINO — The Board of Supervisors approved a music festival last week to be held at Glen Helen Regional Park, featuring big-name entertainment and benefiting Vietnam veterans.

The license agreement with "Vietnam — 10 Years After," a non-profit corporation, clears the way for the festival Nov. 2 and 3.

Billed as a non-political event, the festival will raise money for the California Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Lamar Williams Foundation for Agent Orange Victims and Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program.

Gerry Newcombe, acting chief of administration for the Regional Parks Department, said daily attendance cannot exceed 25,000 under the terms of the agreement.

The non-profit corporation has leased Sycamore Flats for parking. Newcombe said no overnight camping will be allowed, and the park will be closed to the general public during the two days.

The Sheriff's Department and California Highway Patrol will be directly paid for security and traffic control. The county estimated its net revenue from the amphitheater rental at $50,000.

Joe Walsh, Lee Greenwood, Joe Cocker, Sammy Hagar and the group Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young are among the acts scheduled.

Meg Tilly is inspiring in 'Agnes of God'

By David Elliott
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Meg Tilly, who played the young friend of the deceased in "The Big Chill" and was a standout teen-ager in "Tex," has astonishing presence in "Agnes of God." As Agnes, a young nun whose pregnancy and bloody, aborted delivery sets off a storm of scandal, Tilly makes us believe that miracles may be possible.

In the film written by John Pielmeier from his hit play, Agnes is a sort of holy fool, aflame with a love which she cannot imagine might mask sexual anxieties. The plot is a dramatic machine, timed to work by elaborate counterweights of evidence and doubt — there are coy clues that Agnes may have been a victim of anorexia and also of sexual abuse. We can't decide if she is a hysteric who killed her baby in a fit of mad, self-deluding rebellion against her calling or is a chalice for the mysterious workings of God.

In a performance that shifts focus across the emotional spectrum with great naturalness and passion, Tilly causes us to take seriously both possibilities. And amazingly, in a skeptical age, her look of beatific joy as she chants prayerful songs, or kisses the cow she milks in the convent barn, perhaps gives an edge to the supernatural interpretation.

The darkly handsome film (directed by Norman Jewison, photographed by Sven Nykvist) goes to lengths to seem more than a photographed play, but it's still a stage whodunit at heart. At the center, providing surges of force and spells of magical calm, Tilly doesn't show the almost playful sexuality that Amanda Plummer is said to have demonstrated as the original Agnes on Broadway. Yet her transparently glowing face probably does more to convince us that Agnes is one of God's anointed (though one saddled with a lot of psychic baggage).

Sorting through that baggage, and bringing in big steamer trunks of their own anxieties, are the mother superior (Anne Bancroft), who has used Agnes to prop up her weak faith, and an investigating psychiatrist (Jane Fonda), who must determine if the girl is insane. Fonda's role is expertly played as a hot careerist and born-again skeptic, a mini-Voltaire, but she has some awfully crude moments, as when she lets fly, "I don't give a damn about her spiritual life!"

Nearly every scene is sharpened to a fine point for grab-and-hold-'em effect. The conflict between the two older women has a calculated symmetry. Bancroft and Fonda, solid old pros, sagely counterpunch each other.

Bancroft probably wins a decision on points because her mother superior, wrapped in murky motivation as heavy as her habit, is a woman of more subtle pathos. She so desperately wants to believe in a miracle, but a worldly core of doubt won't let her. So she pushes Agnes to the brink by encouraging an extreme faith that she herself cannot deal with, faced by the bizarre, disturbing results. (As for the most important result, the lost baby seems like a rather bloody stage device.)

This is Meg Tilly's movie, much as "Mass Appeal" was Jack Lemmon's. Their performances visibly come out of something truly felt as people, and this validates or at least makes highly involving some strained and corny moments.

cartoon landscape bearing the call letters for radio station KNTE.

The publishing firm charged $150 to each business that wanted to be on the map.

Bull was hired because the company likes to use local artists, he said.

"We have a staff of artists but we like to use local artists because they know the character and color of the community," said Tom Valletta, the executive vice president for Ranlee.

Ranlee has done community posters for 300 communities, he said.

It really brings the community closer together," Valletta said. "It lets other businesses know who else is in town and opens the lines of communication between businesses."

Bull's first step was to go out to each business and take several photographs of the building which he used to draw the business as accurately as possible.

First he did a pencil version which was revised and approved by the company. Then he did an ink version, and finally the four-color poster was printed.

Like any artist, Bull is not completely satisfied with his work.

He wanted to include Rancho Cucamonga's landmarks but while he did include the Rains House and Bear Gulch there was not enough room for fire stations, churches and buildings like the Virginia Dare Winery and Barton Plaza.

He also battled with the publishing company over the placement of the businesses. For accuracy, Bull wanted to cluster the businesses in areas of the city and leave other parts of town vacant and undeveloped, as they are. But the publisher won so the businesses are spread throughout the city.

Geographical technicalities aside, reaction to the map has been nothing but positive.

"It really points out the highlights. People have fun coming in and pouring over it looking for someone they know," said Danielle Watson, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber received 500 copies of the map which it plans to sell for $5 each at the Grape Harvest Festival next week, she said.

It is holding back selling the map until the businesses have an opportunity to sell the 30 copies they have received to recover their investment in the map.

But some businesses do not plan to sell the maps.

Terry Thomas, the manager of Royal Pizza, said he will not sell the map and does not think it will do a lot to promote his business.

"I just thought it was a cute idea, a unique idea," he said. "It's just something to hang on the wall. It's a conversation piece."

Colleen Brodigan, the co-owner of Dean's Bear Gulch Tires, said she also plans to give the map away to whomever asks for it.

"I signed up for it just because it's a cute idea," she said. "It was a new thing. They aren't going to be doing it again for five years."

Although Bull said the four months he spent preparing the Rancho Cucamonga map often were difficult, he received enough satisfaction from the results to agree to do another map.

The company has just recently sold the map idea to businesses in Upland and Bull is set to begin work on that map next week.

for collecting signatures.

That period was shortened further when the group found some technical problems with the wording on the petitions. Specifically, a post office box number was wrong on the petition, and the document placed the city in San Bernardino rather than San Bernardino County, according to Herman Smith, the chairman of a group related to the political action committee.

Smith said CCC-PAC's organizers called the persons who signed the faulty petitions and had them sign the new ones by Saturday.

Most of the signatures had been collected on the first day of the petition's circulation, last Monday when Howard Jarvis spoke to the group.

Meanwhile, CCC-PAC Chairman Michael Mahoney was claiming Friday that the city had violated the group's constitutional rights to freedom of speech in an incident in which one petition circulator was told to leave a city building.

On Thursday, tempers flared when a 64-year-old member of CCC-PAC tried to circulate one of the petitions at the senior citizen lunch program she regularly attends.

The program is held in the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center and a city worker approached Pam McNulty and told her she could not collect signatures on city property.

McNulty went outside after announcing to the seniors that she would be in front of the building if any of them wanted to sign the petition.

A few minutes later, another person who McNulty believed was a city worker came outside and angrily asked her what she was doing, she said.

Approximately five minutes later the city's director of community services, William Holley, and a local developer, Jeff Scerenka, approached McNulty and allegedly told her it was illegal to circulate petitions on city property.

"They were very gentlemanly," McNulty said. "They told me about parks and what they thought of the petition."

McNulty said she did not know the law and so left the proximity of the city building.

Upon hearing about the incident, Mahoney checked with his group's attorney and said he discovered there is nothing in the law to prevent political groups from circulating petitions on city property.

"Just the fact that it occurred is a violation of our constitutional rights," Mahoney said, adding that his group is considering seeking a restraining order from the courts to prevent the city from barring petitioners from city property in the future.

But that is likely unnecessary, Mahoney said. He said City Manager Lauren Wasserman received an opinion from City Attorney Jim Markman that petitions may be circulated on city property. A memo has gone out to city employees to make sure the incident is not repeated, Mahoney said.

"Basically, if they are not interfering with the (city) program, they have a right to circulate petitions on city property, according to the city attorney," Holley said.

director of marketing.

Richard Lewis says he's never worked anywhere except within the company. He started with Lewis Homes in 1965 when he was fresh out of the Claremont Men's College.

"Myself and my brothers all worked summers for our dad. I always did sort of menial jobs. When I started working here the company was small, we only had about 10 or 15 employees. I was a glorified errand boy/management trainee, Lewis says.

"Then I got into buying land for the company. I used to spend a lot of time working with local city governments to get our projects through. I don't do that much anymore. I'm not on the firing line like I used to be."

Local planners and other city officials who have worked with the team of Ralph and Richard Lewis over the years say the father-and-son team is quite a tandem.

"If I'm a mover, my dad certainly is the shaker," Lewis said of his father. "I think it's a lot like those old police movies where there are two cops, one who clubs a guy under a light and the other who tries to convince him to confess. I'm the one who gives the guy a cigarette."

One-on-one relationships are his keys to success.

"I would rather deal one-on-one. I'd rather negotiate a deal where everyone feels they've won even if I've had to compromise some," he says.

Lewis says the company has tried to build its reputation on good, sound projects. "When I put my name on it I want to do it right," he says.

"Lewis Homes has excellent tracts south of the Pomona Freeway. The company is known for its quality. It builds at the high end of the line," says Ontario Planning Director Joyce Babicz. "Richard and the company go into colors, that's what I appreciate. Ralph and his son, Richard, are good builders."

"This is going to sound like a commercial but we are the largest building company in volume in this area and proud of it," Lewis says. "Right now this is the hottest area in the country, I mean the west end of San Bernardino County and the east end of Los Angeles County. This area is exploding and we want to be a part of it."

Upland Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock agrees. He jokingly says, "If you own a house in this area, chances are it's a Lewis home."

Although building a strong business reputation is important to Lewis, he says community service shouldn't take a back seat.

Lewis is a former board member of the Upland Chamber of Commerce and is a West End YMCA board member. His other honors and accomplishments include being named one of the "Outstanding Young Men of America" in 1980; is listed in "Who's Who in America;" being a member of several business trade organizations; and a frequent speaker and panelist before businesses, academic and civic planning groups.

The company is politically, active, he says. "I'd never run for anything but we try and stay active. We aren't too active on the federal level, although U.S. Rep. Dave Drier is a good friend. We work more on the state level, Lewis says.

Taking time to sit on his laurels is difficult for Lewis. Deals must be and are made every day. He's a wheeler and dealer.

"It's a good, rewarding job," he says of his work. "It's nice when you can drive down a street and say we've built those houses. It gives me a true sense of accomplishment to do something and do it well."

Gourmet To Go!

"The Elegant Deli"

Gourmet To Go Deli is located at 354 W. Foothill Blvd., Upland, (just east of Upland High School, just west of Euclid next to Warehouse Records.)

Gourmet To Go Deli is a full-service delicatessen featuring great sandwiches, scrumptious salads, imported wines and beers, cheesecakes and mousses, party platters, fresh foods daily and they cater.

Now Gourmet To Go is an excellent deli to frequent when the deli desire hits you but catering is the time when Ben Robinson, owner, his cooking and his employees truly shine.

There are listed catering prices available, clearly explained on an information sheet which you are welcome to pick up and file away for future references, but what Ben would like to stress most is that none of these catering suggestions are iron clad or unchangeable. "You may suggest a dollar figure you have in mind and we'll see if we can work with it. We will also work right with you to develop a special menu for you and your guests" says Ben.

The advantage to catering done by Gourmet To Go is that you are able to come in and not only see the varieties of meat, cheeses, breads, salads, and relishes available but to taste, touch and feel the kind of food you'd like at your party. Photographs of actual past catering jobs are on display.

Full buffets are possible for perhaps your weddings, anniversaries, office parties, open houses, birthdays, or graduations. Hor D'Ouvres again for all office parties, open houses, or baby and wedding showers, poker and card parties, any informal occasion. Giant grinders for after sports events, school functions, or pool parties. Of course the occasions are endless as are the possibilities of catering them. With the coming holidays Gourmet To Go can make the hectic days easier while impressing your guests with deli delights. You might also consider the Monday Night Football games, the baseball playoffs or even Friday night's Dallas gatherings with any size party platters or foot long sandwiches. Ben says, "Just call for details, he will be glad to help you."

Gourmet To Go is a full service deli and says Ben, "When we go out and serve our food, our waiters wear tuxedos. We provide excellent deli food at affordable prices with a touch of elegance."

Gourmet To Go appreciates one weeks notice but can almost always do party platters on short notice.

Gourmet To Go hours are Monday-Saturday 10:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. and Sunday 11:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.

World swim champ keeps active in sport

By Jim Dull

The English Channel is renown for its high tides, rough currents traveling up to seven miles an hour, and freezing temperatures often dipping below 50 degrees.

Three hundred boats a day make their way through the channel, first challenged and conquered by naval captain Matthew Webb in 1875. Egypt's Nasser el Sahzli set the standard for men of eight hours and 45 minutes.

However, the world's record is held by a woman.

On July 19, 1978, a 23-year-old California girl swam across the 20.5-mile distance between England and France to establish the record that still stands. The mark of seven hours and 40 minutes (32 minutes faster than the existing record) has not been challenged since.

For her efforts, Penny Dean earned a spot in the Swimming Hall of Fame in Florida and the Guinness Book of World Records.

These days, Dean can be found coaching and teaching at Pomona College in Claremont. A resident of Upland, the 30-year-old Dean has enjoyed coaching success in swimming and water polo.

But that wasn't the original plan. Dean was initiated into the sport of marathon swimming when she was a little less than a year old. At the tender age of ten, Dean attempted to become the youngest person ever to swim across the Golden Gate.

It was a failure in more ways than one. Not only did she fall short of accomplishing the feat, but in the process Dean felt as if she had let down her mother, a feeling that stayed with the youngster while growing up.

Dean recalls seeing her mother walking away in apparent disgust after the young girl was unable to continue in the treacherous waters below the Golden Gate.

She made up her mind that she would never disappoint her mom again. It wasn't until later when Dean wrote a book, 'Just Try One More,' (never published), that she discovered her mother's true feelings.

"I walked away because I thought I pushed too hard," Dean recalled her mother saying.

"For the both of us, the channel was really important. We worked together May, June through the end of July when I swam it," Dean said recently.

"I did a lot of mental training (before the swim). My mind had already accepted that I had swam the channel and set the record," Dean said.

Dean said that breaking the eight-hour mark was unforeseen at the time she set her record swim. That a woman would break the mark was even less of a possibility.

Just when she seemed at the top of the world following her record swim, disaster struck as Dean had to undergo several surgeries to relieve blood flow through her left shoulder.

Born without a major artery in her left arm, the problem went undetected until 1977.

Dean experienced intense pain in the shoulder and was told she might lose her arm if she didn't quit swimming. She swam after that, but eventually had to retire from marathon swimming because of the unbearable pain.

Last September, Dean revisited the hospital and had her first rib removed to relieve the pressure on her artery in her arm. Although she is still very limited she is now able to swim more freely and with less pain.

"At least I have a way to feel good about my body and myself again," Dean said, "I will get back into it (swimming) from the standpoint of wanting to swim and enjoying it."

"I want to do it enough so that I feel good every morning when I'm awake and alive."

Mornings for Dean begin at the early hour of 5 a.m. as she heads for the pool, but not for her own training. She first got into coaching at Pomona College on a part-time basis, but eventually was given a full-time position in charge of two programs, including women's swimming and women's water polo.

An undergraduate at Pomona College Dean studying law, she had no intentions on becoming a swimming coach. "I was gonna be a lawyer and that was it. But things changed along the way."

One constant is Dean's devotion to swimming. She has coached long distance swimming outside the university level and has coached an amputee to successfully swim the Catalina Channel, as well as the oldest man.

Fifty-year-old Dale Petranec swam the same channel last month.

"I have sort of a wierd philosophy," Dean said. "If people have gotten a lot out of a sport they should give something back."

Dean continues to pay dividends to the sport in many different ways. She has authored a manual to help those wanting to get involved with long distance swimming, "How To Swim A Marathon." She was the founder and former president of the Catalina Channel Swimming Federation, which makes sure swims are recorded and is in charge of safety regulations.

She is currently the Southern California Long Distance chairman, heading a group working to get long distance swims into the Olympic Games.

"My long range goal is to be an Olympic coach. That's not just long distance ... to achieve it as a pool coach also," Dean said.

"So I have a lot of goals. At the same time I'll be trying to enjoy myself and do the best I can."

Tom Comeau

ON THE MOVE — Upland High School quarterback Greg Fiorindo (10) and teammates will play their first home game of the season Friday against arch-rival Chaffey in a Baseline League contest. The Scots are 2-2 on the season, having defeated Don Lugo last week by a 14-13 count on the final play of the game.

Double duty for Ingerslev

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Chris Ingerslev, son of Sven and Lis Ingerslev, is seeing double duty once again this fall for Brown University.

In addition to being a defender on the school's soccer squad, the 5-foot-10, 170-pound senior is also the placekicker for the Bruins' football squad. Last fall he led Brown in scoring with 43 points, with a long field goal of 42 yards.

Goalie clinic

Upland AYSO Region 32 will stage Goalie Clinic Sunday afternoon at the 11th Street Soccer Park.

The clinic, scheduled between 4 and 7 p.m. is for Divisions 4, 5 and 6 boys and girls. All coaches are asked to bring two goalies from their respective teams to work with.

Theatrical group enrollment open for youngsters

Sunshine Generation, a nationwide program for children is now enrolling locally. Children involved in Sunshine Generation are trained in musical theater dance, singing, music theory and performing techniques. The group is open to boys and girls ages 2 thru 15 and no previous experience is required.

"Sunshine Generation is designed to help children develop confidence" according to Vicki Slater, local group director. "The classes and the shows are very positive with lots of praise and applause for each performer. Even the shyest kids just seem to blossom in that type of environment. I make sure all the kids know how special they are for sharing their talents with their community."

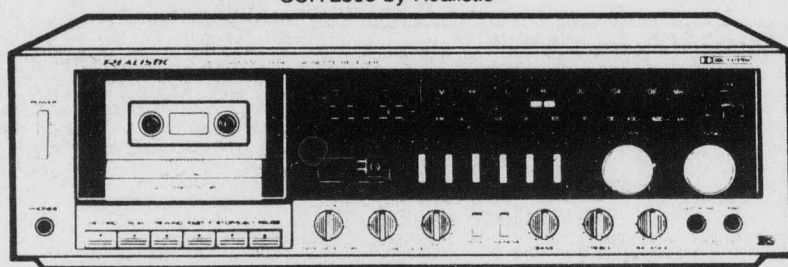

Clad in their orange and yellow costumes, Sunshine Generation students entertain local audiences with song and dance numbers on a monthly basis. Upcoming performances include the Los Angeles County Fair, the Rancho Cucamonga Wine Festival and several parades. For more information on the Sunshine Generation contact Vicki Slater at 981-4043.
